

Simon Bloom
CEO and Founder Simon Bloom Consultancy

Simon Bloom MSc MA Adv. Dip MBACP (accred.) is a Family Enterprise Consultant and CEO and founder of Simon Bloom Consultancy. SBC works with family enterprises to help multi-generational families with the organisational, relational and personal aspects of their lives. From both personal and professional experience, SBC understands the complex nature of family enterprises and the challenges facing the different generations within them.

Simon's combination of being a teacher, psychotherapist, organisational psychologist and neuro-scientist enables him to have a perspective that is rare and penetrating when it comes to explaining the behaviours of individuals, families and businesses.

Simon gained his BSc in New Jersey, and his MA in California, and subsequently his MSc in Organisational Psychology and Psychiatry from King's College, London. He also achieved his Advanced Diploma in Humanistic Psychology in London, and is currently completing his PhD in neuroscience at the IOP in Kings College, London. His research interest is establishing an evidence base for neurological change, using sophisticated techniques to create a deeper understanding of the processes of social and psychological change, which can apply to both individuals and organizational systems and their family offices / businesses.

Alongside lecturing at conferences and time spent on his writing, most of Simon's time today is spent advising governments, organisations, charities and high net worth individuals on ways to improve health, profitability and growth.
