

Fiona Fehlmann studied journalism and communications at the University of Zurich from 2012 to 2017 with a minor in modern history. Her master's thesis was entitled «Legitimität durch PSM-Narrative? Ein Experiment zum Einfluss von Public Service Media Narratives auf die Legitimitätsbeurteilung der Schweizer Radio- und Fernsehgesellschaft (SRG SSR)» (Legitimacy through PSM narrative? An experiment on the influence of public service media narratives on the legitimacy evaluation of the Swiss Broadcasting Corporation SRG SSR) won the 2017 Goldmedia Prize for innovative final papers.

Since May 2018 Fiona Fehlmann has been a doctoral student working on the SNSF project «Service public: Publikumsakzeptanz und Zukunftschancen» (Public service: public acceptance and future opportunities) at Chur University of Applied Sciences in cooperation with the University of Basel.